Dear Author
improve methodological part and resubmit

Requirements for research papers

The Papers containing results of the social and economic empirical studies should include information on used methodology and methods in the dedicated chapter of the article.

This information must include the following:

- name of the organization or individuals that conducted the study;
- dates of research (field work) or time period of the analyzed data;
- data sources used and the empirical basis of the study;
- structure of the population;
- type of the sample, its size and information about its adjustments, as well as sampling error;
- description of the data collection methods (e.g., surveys, interviews, observations, experiments, content analysis etc.);
- exact wording of the questions, as well as their type (e.g., open, closed, semi-closed, etc.);
- description of the methods of data analysis (e.g., when estimating correlation coefficients – their statistical dependencies must be indicated; when using factor analysis – the percentage of explained variance has to be provided);
- authors of methodological tools;

- brief summary on the positive and negative methodological experience: testing of methodological tools, difficulties in the implementation of the initial research concept, discovery of the problems with the methodological tools, unpredictable organizational and methodical situations.

When formatting tables one should indicate more specific information about the provided data. For instance, an author have to specify whether the percent of the respondents, who answered particular question, is calculated as a share from the total number of respondents or a share from the number of respondents, who just answered corresponding question. As the second example, a researcher has to indicate total number of observations together with their share in total. Similar or even more attention has to be paid to the graphical interpretation of the data.

Finally, it is very important to compare obtained results with the data from other studies.

desk-review
that's an interesting topic, and the math part seem to be, preliminary, quite solid however, please, proofread the text one more time, it still has traces of Bahasa instead of English :) this needs to be corrected, improve and resubmit
please, provide the final version in two formats - "clean" final and also the one with tracked changes in editing mode where all necessary changes are visible
